

Supporting Language & Literacy

18 Months: The Importance of Asking Questions

Asking your child questions teaches them that their ideas, thoughts, feelings, and opinions matter. Giving them the opportunity to share their thoughts teaches them to use their words to express themselves. Try asking children more open-ended questions because it allows them to think critically and express their own thoughts.

TIPS & ACTIVITIES

Encourage your child to communicate with words, signs, pictures, and gestures. If your child points to something, model by labeling the object and then work on fading prompts.

Use positive words and give more attention to positive behaviors. "Look how nicely you put the toy away. Good job."

Get on your child's eye level and face them when talking. It helps them to see how your mouth moves to make different sounds.

Expand your child's vocabulary. Your child says, "Dog!" You say, "Yes. A dog. Dogs say, 'Woof!'"

Teach your child about their body. Point to and say the name of that body part.

Common Language Milestones

Follows simple, one-step directions without gestures, for example, "Give me the toy"

Asks questions and uses short phrases, like, "Where is kitty?" or "Let's go bye bye"

Meaningfully says 3 or more words, other than mama or dada

Points to make requests, to comment, or to get information

Uses their name to refer to themselves

Responds to questions

Early Detection is Intervention

Your child is always learning.

As a caregiver, you have an amazing opportunity to guide them on a path to success!

Talk with your child's healthcare provider if your child:

Does not make any attempts to communicate

Doesn't hold eye contact

Doesn't respond when name is called

Does not babble

Source: Pathways.org

ADDITIONAL RESOURCES

Pathways: Communication

Harvard University: Center on the Developing Child

Cox Campus

The Basics

CDC Milestones